

Upcoming weekend July 6 & 7

Posted by estapete - 30 Jun 2013 21:04

This weekends schedule will be to attempt a time trial day on Saturday with a full day of racing action for Sunday. Sunday will be the Pro MX Showdown, Street Showdown and the Pro Showdown which is being sponsored by Affordable Carpets and Affordable Shipping. All our other classes will also be competing for the Summit E.T. points. Hopefully the weather will cooperate and dry the place out. The pits are completely under water and we certainly could use some dry weather.

We always had one it used to be 12 flat! then it was Removed and put back in place after one or two seasons and LAST year lowered to the current 11.50 rule matching the Bracket finals.

I agree. Who races a bone stock car? Programmers, tires, exhaust improvements. Look at Dicks Trailblazer for instance, as long as its street legal, then it should run, provided it meets the safety rules.

While I'm opining.... Pro times are stupid. You can fall off a turnip truck and hit the 8s. 9.0 is ridiculous. You can mailorder an 8 second car that weighs 3200#.

And running a 9.0 against a 17.99 second car is dangerous. REALLY? 17.99? That's a STREET time. Not Pro. My dually is 2 seconds faster loaded with tools.

And more questionable rules is the no targs brake in pro. If every other division runs it, why shouldn't we? It. Puts our division at a disadvantage. We' d also get more cars if brakes were allowed. Why would any ihra pro car want to have to race super pro?

I agree Jeff, we have a turbo car that relies on the transbrake to build boost and only classes we could run are superpro or modified. Would like to run pro with it since there is no box in it and not really looking for anymore trophies.

So how are things looking for a time trial day tomorrow?

What time do things start on a time trial day?

Will there be fuel available?

Thanks
