

Sunday July 28 schedule change

Posted by estapete - 17 Jul 2013 21:30

The scheduled Test & Tune event for July 28th has now been changed to a bracket race event. This will be not be a Summit E.T. points race so the rules will be a bit more flexible for those wishing to compete.

What response are you looking for? What's the problem?

Ryan what is the issue that you are having. If it is the time trial reschedule the explanation is that at the last one we only drew 30 something vehicles so another one right now doesn't seem like it will work. We made it a non points race just in case someone has already made plans to travel, vacation or whatever. Also we are trying to see if we can draw some of the cars that are not bound by our current NHRA Summit E.T. Series rules for example IHRA allows their non electronics class to use trans. brakes where we cannot during our points series.

Pete,

Does that mean you will be allowing the use of transbrakes in Pro on the 28th, I'd be all for that? Was looking forward to a tnt, couldn't make the last one due to my youngest graduating high school.

You can pay to make time trials on a race day or you can enter modified to get some passes in.

For the time trial class, just show up, go through tech, and tell them you're there to time trial only. I think there's an oil down deposit (we've had some issues in the past with people showing up weekly to time trial and holding everything up by oiling down every week). Of course if you don't oil down, though, you're good to go. Periodically during the day they'll call up the time trial only class, which there's usually only 1 or 2 at most.

Modified is just another trophy class that anyone can run in. A lot of people enter modified to get some extra runs in, so you have a mix of some dragsters, some footbrake cars, maybe even some street cars.

Hope that helps you out.

we have resolved the issues with the person and there is no problems. sorry for this . we will not let this happen again. it has nothing to do with any esta people. They have been GREAT. Just a few people stirring up shit .

Just a thought, maybe the low car count could be because of graduations.
