Yeah it does matter! I went to Spencer last night. I like to promote our local track. First question they usually ask after payout is if its 1/4 or 1/8. Yeah we can play nice. I will bring the sandbbox today so he can play with my daughter 🙄

kinda mattered to myself also , daughters 1st time back out this season running after having a child , was a little worried about 1320 to get her feet wet again , but all went well , tuned it back 1st run 9.0 talked with her , she was comfortable , uped the tune up a little more and she was fine with it , 8.62 off the gas, with 5.05 lite , her personal best , and she felt safe with it
• shes originally a racer , 660 to 900 ft her feet back wet would have been easier on my nerves •
so it does matter to some of us ,

Ron, you kind of proved my point. You guys raced regardless, just adjusted so it worked ok. I understand what you're saying, though. Everyone's entitled to their opinion, I just know that I'll go racing 1/8 or 1/4. It doesn't matter to me or most of the people I know.

I run whatever also. Like I said in prior thread I like to promote ESTA while at other tracks. More cars means better payouts for all of us. Good luck to all of you guys at the Brackets. Bring home the gold!!
